CAMPANULA

CANTERBURY BELLS

Few groups of flowers possess such rare beauty as the Campanulas. All have more or less bell-shaped flowers in lovely colors; white, pink, blue, rose, lilac, purplish rose, violet-blue and lavender. All are very desirable and the glorious large bells make a very effective display. Plant in full sunlight and do not crowd in beds. They like a good, rich soil, and in the spring a little fine manure and some bonemeal should be dug around each plant.

Much has been written about this marvelous new lily. Because of its many fine attributes we named it "The Wonder Lily," for it really is a wonder lily.

EVERBLOOMING

It is a continual bloomer, sending out new spikes which bear the long, trumpet-shaped, wax-like flowers—blooming continues until stopped by frost.

COLOR—DESCRIPTION

Flowers are white, but the color on the outside of the petals varies like in the Regal Lily, that is, from pinkish brown, or brownish backs to clear white. The throat is about the same color as our well known Easter Lilies.

The plant itself is everything to be desired. It is strong and very erect and the stems are thickly clothed in very long leaves. The spread of the leaves oftentimes measures twenty inches.

PERFECTLY HARDY

The Wonder Lily is very hardy, and will withstand rather severe winters. However, it is always best to mulch them well just as soon as the ground freezes for the winter.

WHAT MR. G. D. HICKS SAYS ABOUT "THE WONDER LILY"

In the fall of 1932 I purchased from you 6 bulbs of the Philippinense Formosanum lilies. Last year had from 2 to 3 stalks from each bulb, at least two of which attained the height of 7 feet with 8 and 10 blooms. They were lightly mulched over last winter with well rotted wheat straw and a small amount of bone meal worked in the spring. Four of the stalks this year are over 8 feet tall with two of them 12 blooms, one 13 and one with 22 blooms, every bud of which bloomed out, though the top blossoms were a bit smaller than the lower ones.

This is the most satisfactory lily I have ever grown; perfectly hardy in this climate and seems to improve each year.

Put out 6 more bulbs last fall which have borne from 3 to 10 blooms 3 1/2 to 5 1/2 feet tall. Blooms 7 inches long. They are very fragrant late in the afternoon and at night.
